

Article Link

<https://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/why-2016-was-actually-one-of-the-best-y...>

IPA in the Washington Post with What We've Learned About Poverty

IPA Executive Director Annie Duflo and Senior Policy Communications Associate Jeff Mosenkis write about our work in The Washington Post. Arguing against prevailing views that the world is getting worse, they show that many measures of poverty have been improving, and cite four recent areas where we've learned what works. Read the full piece from the link below.

January 01, 2017