

Authors

Lasse Brune
Northwestern University

Dean Karlan
Northwestern University

Staff

Areum Han
Research Coordinator

Kyle Holloway
Country Director, Colombia

Danielle Moore
Program Manager

Johann Roldan
Program Coordinator

Rebecca Rouse
Program Director, Financial Inclusion

Measuring Financial Health around the Globe: Survey Manual

INNOVATIONS FOR POVERTY ACTION
JUNE 2020

Measuring Financial Health around the Globe: Survey Manual

What constitutes financial health? Defining this conceptually, and constructing a simple empirical measure, is challenging. The idea of financial health is abstract and combines multiple indicators and concepts. Moreover, financial health is not necessarily tied to the usage of formal financial products, and thus cannot be measured solely through financial access indicators as it is possible to be financially healthy outside of the formal financial system. Any measure of financial health must also be able to capture less easily observable indicators such as financial management behaviors, as well as informal planning and coping mechanisms such as social networks. Financial health may also include subjective measures of wellbeing, stress, or satisfaction with one's own position in life.

We argue for a simple, transparent conceptualization of financial health. We start with a theoretical, almost definitional, assertion: finance is about moving money across time, space, and risky outcomes. We propose three primary concepts that encompass financial health: Access-to-Funds, which is a final outcome construct, and Access-to-Finance and Financial Behavior, which are intermediate constructs that each incorporate several components.

June 01, 2020