Vox on IPA and USAID's Cash Benchmarking Research

In Vox, Daniel Handel of International Initiative for Impact—and formerly of USAID—covers USAID's work on cash benchmarking, evaluating the impact of cash transfers compared to more "traditional" forms of aid. The article cites IPA work and affiliation to cash benchmarking, including a study in Rwanda and notes USAID appointing IPA Founder Dean Karlan as the agency's Chief Economist.

September 05, 2023