

Researchers

Andrew Dillon
Northwestern University

Claudia Casarotto
Chief Global Programs Officer

Michael Podesta
Global Communications Specialist

Pathways to Profit: Experimental Evidence on Agricultural Technology Adoption

This brief focuses on the profitability of adopting technology for farmers and small- and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) and examines the financial sustainability of these investments over time. The evidence presented here can help researchers and policymakers better understand farmer characteristics and favorable conditions for technology adoption, identify constraints inhibiting adoption, and draw lessons to replicate or scale successful policies around technology adoption in agriculture.

Read the brief here.

Partners

Food and Agriculture
Organization of the United Nations

Investment Centre of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO)